Large businesses are reviewing their human resource requirements with scrutiny and releasing employees at an alarming rate. In many cases, the released individuals are hired right back on a consulting basis driving a substantial amount of the consulting growth to date. Many of the consulting businesses are formed by groups of people just like this who have worked together in the past, bringing together complementary skills and often customers. Rarely do consultants have established businesses, so they are starting from scratch and many times have been exposed to large communication budgets experiencing the positive impact technology can have on a business. A lot to think about, but PanTerra delivers complete communication services so consultants can focus their time and energies on their specialties.

A communications solution not tied to any physical location. When renting office space, purchasing expensive equipment and commuting to work is not part of the plan, PanTerra is a key component. Wherever you have a browser, you are attached to PanTerra.
